Baron of Blackwood Tamara Leigh

THE FEUD

England, 1308. Boursier, De Arell, Verdun—three noblemen who secretly gather to ally against their treacherous lord. Though each is elevated to a baron in his own right and given a portion of his lord's lands, jealousy and reprisal lead to a twenty-five-year feud, pitting family against family, passing father to son.

THE PRIZE

England, 1333. When Lady Quintin Boursier leads an army against the Baron of Blackwood to demand the release of her abducted brother, she finds the same fate awaits her. Now she must free herself and discover where Griffin de Arell holds her brother before her family's lands are forfeited. But as the long winter nights unfold and those prowling the black wood move the feud nearer its deadly end, Quintin realizes she may have wronged her captor. And he is as much a captive to her—she whose secret will spoil the prize others seek to make of a woman no man should want.

THE VICTOR

Baron Griffin de Arell protects those who belong to him, and now that the tempest who dared put a blade to his throat is his, he intends to protect her—if only from herself. However, Quintin Boursier yet has games to play. Though Griffin resists her wiles, when it appears her family's lands are forfeited, a glimpse of her woman's heart tempts him to make the lady his in truth. Now with the enemy responsible for inciting the feud determined to claim her as his prize, Griffin must join his grudging allies in bringing peace to their lands and protecting the woman who first set herself at his walls—then his warrior's heart.

Join Griffin and Quintin in the third and final book in this best-selling medieval romance series as the Boursiers, De Arells, and Verduns seek the light at the end of their long, dark feud.

A great end

This was a good series. I recommend reading it as a series but could be read alone. I think the books got better as the series went along. I really enjoyed Quinten and Griffin's story. Although I felt the epilogue did not flow as well as the book. Seemed so much information in such a short chapter.

Another fantastic story

I'll confess it, this isn't an objective review. Although I don't know Ms Leigh, I love her stories. All of them. Historical and contemporary alike. This one is just as good. In fact I needed this story to fill in the gaps from the other books in the series, and I'm glad that Ms Leigh spend a good portion of the book showing us exactly that. It had a few surprises too. If you haven't read the other books in the series, I would recommend reading them first. It's not required, but you will enjoy the book so much more. I'm hoping this one is also scheduled to be released as an audiobook, and I'm fingers-crossed-hoping Mary Sarah Agliotta will be the narrator again. I love her work too.

Can't wait to read Sir Durand's story when it's released next year, and I'm impatient for the re-release of her book 'Lady Ever After'.

I truly enjoyed this entire series and love the prospect of a spin off after that epilogue. Tamara Leigh has fast become one of my favorite historical romance authors and I am quickly working my way through her 'backlist' as I wait for new books to release. If you love historical romance I can't suggest her books enough. They are considered 'clean' reading or faith based but as I have stated in previous reviews the book neither 'preach' at or to you not do they lack in the romance department. Is there out and out descriptions of sexual acts, no, but these books are no less wonderful due to that, in fact I would hasten to say that they are all the more beautiful because of it. The reader is allowed truly feel the romance that occurs between the couples because it is put into your own hands. There are no author descriptives of what one should expect, just the knowledge that romance and love occur.

Baron of Blackwood was a wonderful way to wrap up The Feud. I had been waiting anxiously for this story to get here as all the characters have played such integral roles, Lady Quintin, she has been a might handful through out the series (no wonder she would become Lady Thomasin was bound to be her 'daughter', she is strong willed and gracious all at the same time. Her heart is as big as her loyalty and I loved both of those things about her.

de Arell is a truly wonderful character. I have adored him since meeting him more fully in The Baron of Emberly's story, (book 2) his heart matches perfectly Lady Quintin's. He is a man of worth and courage, as they all truly are once you get to know them. I adored how quickly he recognized his feelings for Quintin and could only wish he had pushed her sooner, but the man has a will of iron and the patience of a saint because he learned his lady and knew well how to handle her with out pushing her away, a trying feat for him no doubt.

There was an interesting twist that came about and it wasn't until this book that I put it all together, as it should have been. Just when you think you know what is going on Tamara gives the 'knife' a little twist and surprises you. When you get to the last pages and everything falls in to place you will wonder why you didn't pick up on that little bit before.

I have listened to these on audio as well and I can not tell you how much I enjoy Mary Sarah Agliotta's narration. Her tone and accents are perfection for this series. So far she has been the narrator for all the audio's of Tamara Leigh that I have heard and I am so hopeful that doesn't change. These two women between Tamara's story telling, and the way Mary Sarah brings those stories to life are perfection!

If you are a romance fan at all I highly recommend these books. They will just make your soul smile a truly wonderful feeling to have when you close the cover of your book. It leaves you just a tad book hungover but not so much that you aren't turning around right away to grab the next one!

Sidenote: This book is not a standalone with in a series. I HIGHLY recommend reading these books in order, particularly this one since it wraps the series up.

~ HAPPY READING ~

I wish I could give it four and a half stars. I really really enjoyed this book. But after the second book in this series, I just couldn't give it five. Don't get me wrong, I thoroughly enjoyed this book, but the second book in this series had so captured my attention that this one was about a half star shy of it. But these characters were well developed and the story intriguing. I liked how this book somewhat spanned the timing of the other two and Leigh did a fabulous job of pulling it all together in a way that kept the reader tuned in to the story and prevented confusion.

A great conclusion to the series, a lot of fun! Full review to come.

Content

Romance: Pretty clean, closed door intimacy between married couple and mild innuendo

Language: None

Violence: Mild

An exciting conclusion to the trilogy.

The exciting conclusion to The Feud trilogy was everything I expected. Kudos to Tamara Leigh for another tale that was hard to put down. Griffin and Quintin's story was intriguing, touching and so romantic! I'm anxiously awaiting Rhys and Lianor's story. Hint, hint! (Note: This is definitely a series to be read in order.)

Rebekah says

Great ending!

These books have a lot of edgy content. They aren't super descriptive, but there is sex with marriage. Again, not a lot of details, but lots of Tamara Leigh's normal readers might find this series offensive.

I enjoyed the series. The ending here felt a little confusing with all the kids together and trying to keep them all straight in one final chapter. But I still really enjoyed this series and this was a great ending.

Happy reading!!

I have eagerly anticipated the conclusion to Leigh's series, The Feud; and it did not disappoint! I dove into the story, and wished late last night, that I had it in me to stay up and finish it. Leigh once again, transports us to another time and place and breaths life to her characters and the setting. There is the perfect blend of chemistry, hope, love, friendship, suspense, romance and faith. In fact, it will be hard to say goodbye to these characters. Thankfully, I read that she is writing the 6th Book to the Age of Faith series (Sir Durand's tale)!

Baron of Blackwood, starts us back to the beginning of the tale in Book 1, but told from Quintin and Griffin's eyes. I enjoyed getting to see the behind the scene by plays that they shared, which were but hinted at in the previous novels. There is a satisfying ending, but still one that leaves you hopeful that Leigh might revisit these characters again, maybe through their children's tales.

Overall, a very well written clean read romance, with just the right dash of suspense to keep the pages rapidly flying! Really looking forward to what Leigh has in store for us next!

A fantastic ending to a three part romantic adventure! I enjoyed the fact that the first part of the book took place the same time as the other two, so that the reader was able to view all sides of the situation. This author is now one of my favorite historical romance writers. I highly recommend this series.

Piyushi Dhir says

This book is the over-arching one in the story, starting from where Baron Of Godsmere started, moving on through the same time as Baron of Emberly and then going on to end the overall story of the feud and the 6 main protagonists. Some may complain of the overlaps, but personally, I loved reading the entire story from Griffin and Quintin's perspective. As good as the other books in the series, this book is particularly satisfying in the way it wraps up the series.

Lori says

Sigh!!! Great end to the series. The first part of the story is mostly what we already read with more detail on both Baron Griffin de Arell and Lady Quintin Bousier. I loved finding out more of what went on with those two while she was held prisoner. The second part is really the end of who created all the feuds and I won't ruin the story but I am sure most of you have guessed if you have read the first two novels in this series. Overall the way this series ends is fantastic and gives you a smile at the end. Alright, I will admit that a tear came out in the epilogue, but that is to be expected with Tamara Leigh's romances.

On a side note....super excited with her news at the end posted for her readers. I won't ruin the surprise but I can't wait for that story to be told after reading the excerpt gifted to us.

Cheryal says

I really should give this a 3 because I hated the first half. As the third book, the first half was narrated from the third party therefore we had to recap all of the first two books from the third party's angle. I skimmed. BUT holy cow the last half that just dealt with the third party was fabulous! I thought about it all day long and couldn't wait to read at night. I highly recommend this series.

A Satisfying Conclusion

I do love a good ending, and Ms. Leigh's third installment in the Feud Series does a good job delivering a most satisfying conclusion. In short, Griffin and Quintin's story drew more than one smile across my face and at least one contented sigh. For that, I call this book a success!

And for those who might be wondering, I would recommend reading this series in order. This one definitely builds on the previous installments and gives some greater depth to scenes in the other books.

Sarah says

Best yet

I had thought that I had read all of this series until I saw this book on Kindle Unlimited. It was a fantastic way to end the series and answered any lingering questions that I might have had throughout the series. Now, however, I demand a book for Lianor and Rhys! My favorite book yet in this series.

Tamara Tilley says

Two amazing series from author Tamara Leigh, THE AGE OF FAITH SERIES and THE FUED are absolutely incredible!

I'm not going to review the books individually, because I read both series so fast (nine books in all), I have too many stories buzzing around in my head; I would not do them the justice they deserve. Needless to say, it was an incredible journey filled with knights and ladies, castles and baronies, romance, intrigue, and tragedy.

The true center of THE AGE OF FAITH SERIES is the Wulfrith family. Baron Wulfrith, Lady Beatrix, Lady Gaynor, Sir Abel, and Sir Everard, these are the main characters, and each has a book devoted to them. Everything about their stories captivated me, including the alluring covers. Currently, there are six books in this series, with the seventh to be released in Winter 2018. I can't wait!

The FUED series tells the tale of three noblemen: the Baron of Godsmere, the Baron of Blackwood, and the Baron of Emberly, and their family feud that spans twenty-five years. The King wants an end to the feud, so he demands that the families inter-marry, creating bonds instead of rivals. Begrudgingly, the families follow the King's command, and the stories that unfold keep you turning page after page.

My genre of preference is usually contemporary pieces. I'm not one for Regency era, Amish, or fantasy, so I don't generally give period pieces my attention. However, a blogger I follow and respect, showcased books by Tamara Leigh, on more than one occasion, so I decided to give them a try. After reading, THE UNVEILING from THE AGE OF FAITH SERIES, and THE BARON OF GODSMERE from THE FUED SERIES, I was hooked, and immediately bought the other seven books that completed these two series. Each story transported me to a dark but magical era. Passion and pride, rivals and rogues, deception and dalliances. These series are escapism at its best! Exactly what I look for in a book. Thank you, Ms. Leigh, for an incredible journey.
