Noa's Ark C. Gockel

First contact didn't go as planned...

Time Gate 8, one of humanity's portals between the stars, has been overrun by a mysterious alien intelligence, and the planet Luddeccea is now cut off.

Haunted by those she left behind, Commander Noa Sato is on a desperate mission to save her homeworld. Navigating the ancient Ark, she seeks a hidden gate that will transport her ship to Earth and the Galactic Fleet. But the Luddeccean system harbors dangers, and so does her crew.

The only crew member she completely trusts is James Sinclair, but he doesn't trust himself.

James isn't the man he once was. He has a hunger that is never sated, kills without regrets, and is fitted with extraordinary augments he doesn't remember getting. Can James control his augments, or will they control him?

In a future where almost all humans are augmented, James's answer and Noa's mission will determine the fate of the human race ... and the enemy is already within the gates.

Lindsay says

[Noa needs to alert the rest of the universe of the danger first encountered on Luddeccea. This involves the navigating space in the relic of a space ship they "requisitioned" off of Luddeccea, finding supplies for repairs, and rescuing those that Noa's conscious says needs rescuing. (hide spoile

I really enjoyed book 1 and 2 of the series, despite the romance being a bit too much for me sometimes. But there's one character that bothers me more than the rest and I'm sorry... this is going to be a bit of a rant.

I just need to say that I hate Kenji.

He's the worst part of the series so far. Don't try to tell me he's "too innocent" to get that he's being played because of his autism or somehow unable to go to the camps to see what they are really like or is totally unaware of humanity's history. There should be enough factual proof, numbers and figures for his so called brilliant mind to see that things aren't adding up and people around him might be lying to him. If he didn't want it to add up that is. He needs it to add up, because he wants tech to be this great evil that he's always felt it was. I mean, his sister was malnourished and missing fingers right there in front of him and said they did that to her in the camps. I don't think he expected them to hurt her, but I think he's fully aware of the horror being inflicted on others. Otherwise he wouldn't have said "they said they wouldn't hurt you" near the end of the first book. If it was assumed no one was getting hurt at these camps, then why would he need reassurance for his sister? And why didn't he at least go to the camp that held her after he met his sister? He turns a blind eye to the suffering because the "bad guys" make him feel normal and accepted. In the same way he's turned off the apps that make him understand people and never even turn them on temporarily to make sure he's not being fooled. Since the story likes to draw parallels to nazi-germany, then Kenji represents the people who choose not to look because believing the lie is easier. He doesn't fit in with the rest of the world and desperately wants to belong. He hates tech, he fears the sentient time gates and he seems to have fired the first shot by blowing up the gates. He wants to "save his people", but all the people suffering and dying are doing so because of him and his group and not because of any damn AI's or whatever.

All that just makes him one of the bad guys, but what really makes me angry is that he's written like this naïve idiot and Noa suffers from so much guilt from leaving him behind. I want her to be angry with him! I want her to feel betrayal for herself, but also for the rest of the people in the system. Her brother is key to everything and his compliance, his ideas and fears, are causing so much death, yet she's the one with nightmares. I want him to have to pay for his crimes in some way. I don't want him to keep the love and respect of people he's hurt. And I'm afraid he will be forgiven all too easily in books to come. Maybe get to be a hero or just a martyr that does the right thing in the end. Well, guess I'll just have to brave it and read on.

Doing The Right Thing No Matter The Cost

This series must be read in order. The first book is Archangel Down. The second book is Carl Sagan's Hunt

For Intelligent Life In The Universe (a flashback short story). This is the third book. I can't wait to read Heretic!

Noa and her crew aboard the Ark are doing their best to survive and get to the secret Time Gate hidden within the Kanakah Cloud in order to summon help from the Fleet. What is happening on Luddeccea is as bad, if not worse, than the atrocities committed by the Nazis. James is more important than he should be to her... And at times he really creeps her out. Who is he really? What is he? He resembles her dead husband more than is believable. She can't imagine life without him though, especially since her brother Kenji betrayed her. Why did Kenji turn her in to be sent to a concentration camp? Did he realize what he was doing? Can they repair the ship enough to fulfill their mission? Or will they be caught and turned in? What exactly is the Archangel Project? And how is she involved? Shouldn't she know? What does it have to do with James? Who can she trust?

Definitely treating myself to the next one. Loved it.

Susan Groves says

The excitement keeps going from start to finish. More self contained than the previous one, which is surprising for the middle transition book. Can't wait until the finale!

Pam Resner says

Non stop action

You won't want to put it down! Non-stop action will keep you on the edge of your seat. Amazing character development and very well thought out futuristic world that is believable.

Ann O'Nymos says

I think my dislike of Si-Fi might catch up on me. I have sometimes problems following the technology and architecture of this future. And then again there are moments when I think "10 hours for a full system check? That's a bit long for such an evolved technology" or "Wouldn't the human brain totally overload with all this ethernet and internal app functionality"?

I would have thought that if humankind has developed all this advanced technology and uses their brains with so much input that some believes or motives would have to change too. Or maybe not, and this would be the downfall of humanity.

So, the archaic behaviours like racism (what does it matter if you are a “throwback” when you can change or select your genetics? And wouldn't it be seen as something special rather than “mistake”?) or the derogatory behaviour against bots (you have created them why feel like you need to diminish them?) has left me with too many questions.

All these good points to tackle in a book feel “old-fashioned” in the year 2400-something.

Though the core point, “what defines human” is nicely approached. Free will, love, compassion. But I would also add greed and forgiveness. Let's see how all this ends in the next book....

Walter Scott says

Archangel Project #1 was a suspenseful, fairly straight-forward narrative of nifty technology, death camps, physically augmented humans, and intense action.

Noa's Ark (Archangel Project #2) ups the ante. Read Archangel Project #1 first. Make sure that Noa's Ark is already on your reader; this will save you a few minutes of intensive frustration.

Yery good read

John Brown says

A solid extension to the story established in Archangel Down. Possibly a little mixed up in the middle as some of the threads were lost in detail which possibly could have been thinned out.

Tim says

I enjoyed this book. I enjoyed the previous book. I am still not sure where all this is going, but I think I am still hooked into reading the next one. Great writing though

Dinnl says

3.5 stars. This book is still interesting and the characters are developing slightly, but I dont feel that the story has advanced much.

Alan T says

Noa & James and the Luddeceans

Kenji, Noa Sato's brother is working for the Laddecean Guard. He is in complete denial as to the motives of the Laddecean government -- or is it denial?

Excellent characterization and plotting. I look forward to the test of this series.

Carl Wilburn says

Pleasant surprise. First time I've seen this author. Enjoy her characters and her version of the future. She talks about where AI may go and the future of our connections to each other.
