Abby Hayes is an ordinary fifth grader trying to invent a role for herself in a seemingly perfect world. This series combines the edge of BRIDGET JONES with a send-up of self-help books.

Abby's best friend, Jessica, is away for the rest of the school year and Abby's other good friends seem to be spending more time with each other than they are with her. So when Grandma Emma invites Abby to come for a visit over spring vacation, Abby is thrilled--there has never been a better time to get away from home.

But Abby's cousin Cleo is also spending the week with Grandma Emma. At first, Abby and Cleo don't get along at all. But working as a team on a bookmaking project shows them how much they have in common and brings them closer together.

Bought this book today at a sale (from Fully Booked). Only P50! I should really start stocking up on children's books that I can give to my little nieces and nephews when they're finally old enough to start reading. :)

Basically, this book is about friendship. Definitely a great read for kids.

Anne says

I remember being SO excited to read this one. It was unusual because the setting was different; instead of being Abby's house/her school, she was staying at her Grandma's with her cousin Cleo (or is it Chloe?). I remember really liking the banter and rivalry between the cousins, and all the adventures they had. It was a very fun book!
